

Dr. Ronald Saladin is a Professor of Japanese Studies at the University of Trier, Germany. Before he took this position, he taught and conducted research at the Universities of Cologne (Germany) and Vienna (Austria). He also was a Senior Research Fellow at the German Institute for Japanese Studies, Tokyo. In his research, he focuses on contemporary literature, society, media, and popular culture, analyzing gender constructions, lifestyle, youth- and subcultures, and social developments of Japan.