

Dr. Wonjung Min

Visiting Researcher, SNUAC (Seoul National University Asia Center),

Former Faculty Member, Department of History, Pontificia Universidad Católica de Chile

Main research fields:

Korean–Latin American relations; transpacific cultural exchange; popular culture and fandom studies; migration and diaspora; globalization and cultural hybridity

Research:

Her research examines cultural exchange, mobility, and identity formation between Korea and Latin America, with particular attention to popular culture, migration, and everyday practices. Using qualitative methods such as interviews, ethnography, and media analysis, she explores how global cultural flows are locally received, reinterpreted, and negotiated. Her work integrates theoretical frameworks from cultural studies, postcolonial studies, and globalization studies, combining empirical case studies with comparative and transnational perspectives.

Courses Taught:

Korean History and Culture; Comparative Culture of Korea and Latin America; Popular Culture in Northeast Asia; Korean Women in History; Intercultural Communication (in Chile); Race and Society in Latin America; Cultural History of Latin America; History of Latin American Literature (in Korea)
