

MAJOR COURSES

COMPARATIVE CULTURE

The Comparative Culture major emphasizes interdisciplinary approaches to knowledge within three fields: art history, literature, and religion-philosophy. Students take 48 credits in the major distributed among a primary and secondary field. The primary field consists of 36 credits in one of the above three fields. At least 4 credits in the primary field should be a 400-level course. The secondary field consists of 12 credits taken in another field.

COMPARATIVE CULTURE FIELDS

ART HISTORY

For students entering in 2009

The discipline of art history covers all fields of art: from sculpture, architecture, painting, and crafts, to applied and industrial arts. Art is a rich source of knowledge concerning the human condition, providing visual records of human emotions, thought, ideals, and aspirations, as well as evidence of the social and political conditions under which people have lived, past and present.

SOCIAL STUDIES

The Social Studies Major provides students with historical, comparative, and theoretical insights into the processes that constitute civilizations and social orders. Courses consider how particular societies and cultures have changed over time, patterns of similarity and difference across events and places, and how these patterns and processes have been interpreted and depicted in popular and scholarly imagination.

The Social Studies Major has three fields: anthropology-sociology, history, and political science. Students take 48 credits in the major with 36 being in the primary field and 12 in the secondary field of a student's choosing. The distribution of compulsory courses varies among the different fields.

HISTORY

The study of history encourages students to think in critical ways about the human past and the patterns of development that have created the modern world. In its methods and approaches, history stands at the intersection of the social sciences and humanities. The heart of the historical enterprise is the selection, classification, and interpretation of data about the past, and the forming of it through this process into a historical narrative. Together with the training they receive in these analytical procedures, students gain experience in examining intellectual, diplomatic, economic, and social developments from a cross-cultural perspective.
