

DEPARTMENT OF JAPANESE LANGUAGE AND STUDIES

The Department of Japanese Language and Studies has two majors:

Japanese Linguistics and Teaching Methods
Japanese Studies

Students entering the Department of Japanese Language and Studies must choose a major and meet its requirements. Each major requires students to complete 48 credits.

Japanese Language Requirement (common to all DJLS students)

In addition to fulfilling the course requirements for their chosen major, all DJLS students are required to attain a specified minimum level of proficiency in Japanese. The level to be attained depends on the student's linguistic background (for categories of linguistic background, see p. 61):

Category 1 (non-native): JPN322, Advanced Japanese 2

Categories 2 and 3 (native and near-native speakers): JPN350, College Skills

These courses are to be included among the student's Elective DJLS Courses. What other Japanese language courses may be counted as Elective DJLS Courses depends on the student's linguistic background:

1. Students in category 1, who take Japanese for their language requirement (see pp. 76~77), may include in their Elective DJLS Courses any Japanese language courses beyond the level completed for their language requirement.
2. Students in category 2 may include in their Elective DJLS Courses (in addition to JPN350, College Skills) JPN351, 401, 405, 406, and 407.
3. Students in category 3 may include in their Elective DJLS Courses (in addition to JPN350, College Skills) any Japanese language courses they are directed to take prior to enrolling in JPN350 as well as more advanced language courses (JPN351, 400, 401, 405, 406, and 407).

JAPANESE LINGUISTICS AND TEACHING METHODS

The Japanese Linguistics and Teaching Methods Major focuses on study of the Japanese language from the perspectives of linguistic analysis and teaching Japanese as a second language.

Students choosing Japanese Linguistics and Teaching Methods as a major are required to take, in addition to two courses in Japanese history, compulsory for all DJLS students, three basic courses in linguistics, and 16 credits in linguistics and/or Japanese teaching methods (8 credits should be taken in 400-level courses). Elective DJLS Courses may be chosen from courses in linguistics and Japanese teaching methods (see p. 112), and Japanese language (see pp. 111~112) and/or the range of courses concerning Japan on the Japanese Studies Courses list (see pp. 104~106).

Students majoring in Japanese Linguistics and Teaching Methods may include under course categories (2), (3), and (4) above up to a maximum of 8 credits chosen from the following courses offered by the Faculty of Foreign Studies and cross-listed by FCC, provided they were cross-listed in the year when they were taken. For details on these courses refer to the appropriate department descriptions in the 履修要覧学科学科目編 (rishūyōran gakkakamokuhen) and course syllabi on the Loyola system. Some of these cross-listed courses may have prerequisites and/or require the instructor's permission due to limited enrollment places. Furthermore, students may not be able to take courses that have undergone a number or title change, if they have taken them previously under the former number or title.

JAPANESE STUDIES

The Japanese Studies Major offers an interdisciplinary approach to the study of Japan. All courses concerning Japan offered by the Faculty of Comparative Culture have been divided into the following seven fields (see pp. 104~106 below for the list of specific courses included in each field):

1. Art History
2. Business and Economics
3. History
4. Linguistics (as a secondary field only)
5. Literature
6. Religion
7. Social Sciences (Anthropology-Sociology, Political Science)

Students majoring in Japanese Studies take one of these as their primary field and another as their secondary field.

In addition to two courses in Japanese history, compulsory for all DJLS students, Japanese Studies majors are required to take four courses in their primary field and two courses in their secondary field. The primary field should be chosen from one of the six fields other than Linguistics; the secondary field may be chosen from any of the seven. The Elective DJLS Courses in the major may be chosen from the entire range of courses on the Japanese Studies Courses list (see pp. 104~106). Two of the courses taken for the major must be 400-level courses; at least one of these two must be in the student's primary field.

General Requirements	cr	Courses
Compulsory for all DJLS students	8	HST251, Development of Japanese Civilization 1 HST252, Development of Japanese Civilization 2
(1) Primary Field	16	Chosen from one of the six main Japanese Studies fields
(2) Secondary Field	8	Chosen from another of the seven fields
(3) Elective DJLS Courses	16	Chosen from the entire range of Japanese Studies courses and/or Japanese language courses
Two of the courses taken under (1), (2), and (3) must be 400-level courses; at least one of these two must be in the student's primary field.
