

MAJOR COURSES

COMPARATIVE CULTURE

The Comparative Culture major emphasizes interdisciplinary approaches to knowledge within three fields: art history, literature, and religion-philosophy. Students take 48 credits in the major distributed among a primary and secondary field. The primary field consists of 36 credits in one of the above three fields. At least 4 credits in the primary field should be a 400-level course. The secondary field consists of 12 credits taken in another field.

COMPARATIVE CULTURE FIELDS

ART HISTORY

The discipline of art history covers all fields of art: from sculpture, architecture, painting, and crafts, to applied and industrial arts. Art is a rich source of knowledge concerning the human condition, providing visual records of human emotions, thought, ideals, and aspirations, as well as evidence of the social and political conditions under which people have lived, past and present.

RELIGION-PHILOSOPHY

The field of comparative studies in religion-philosophy is centered on understanding the ways in which people of various historical periods and cultures have conceived, imagined, and lived out their lives in the world. Courses focus on understanding the philosophical and religious orientations of human communities as expressed in systems of thought, texts, the arts, rituals, and ethical practices.

INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS AND ECONOMICS

Courses offered in this major emphasize both the development of tools of theoretical and empirical analysis and the application of these tools to the understanding of specific economic phenomena and managerial problems. The major stresses the international dimensions of both business and economics. Within this global context, special attention is given to Japanese business and economic studies.

Students majoring in International Business and Economics must complete 48 credits of IBE courses, including five 300-level courses and three 400-level courses.

SOCIAL STUDIES

The Social Studies major provides students with historical, comparative, and theoretical insights into the processes that constitute civilizations and social orders. Courses consider how particular societies and cultures have changed over time, patterns of similarity and difference across events and places, and how these patterns and processes have been interpreted and depicted in popular and scholarly imagination.

The Social Studies major has three fields: anthropology-sociology, history, and political science. Students take 48 credits in the major with 36 being in the primary field and 12 in the secondary field of a student's choosing. The distribution of compulsory courses varies among the different fields.

SOCIAL STUDIES FIELDS

ANTHROPOLOGY-SOCIOLOGY

Anthropology and sociology focus on how social orders are constituted. Although they are distinct academic disciplines, there is considerable overlap in their intellectual traditions and concerns. They are offered as an integrated field that focuses on culture and society in the making of individual identities, behavior patterns, and social institutions.

HISTORY

The study of history encourages students to think in critical ways about the human past and the patterns of development that have created the modern world. In its methods and approaches, history stands at the intersection of the social sciences and humanities. The heart of the historical enterprise is the selection, classification, and interpretation of data about the past, and the forming of it through this process into a historical narrative. Together with the training they receive in these analytical procedures, students gain experience in examining intellectual, diplomatic, economic, and social developments from a cross-cultural perspective.
